The Cleveland Scandal.

The facility with which campaign alanders are concocted is one of the saddest and most painful features of American political life. As soon as a man reaches any position of prominence he becomes at once a target for the thousand arrows of calumny, and he is happy, in-deed, if the flying darts do not inflict wounds that will forever after rankle and that will poison the springs of happiness during the whole period of natural life. Grover Cleveland, the Democratic candidate for the exalted office of President class of Republican journals a shameful story in regard to his private life and moral character. The story is that he seduced, under promise of marriage, one Maria Halpin, a saleswoman in a Buffalo dry goods house; that he deserted this woman and here. finally, wearied with her importunities, he had her seized under circumstances of this lubricating quality, and who rants great brutality and conveyed to a private about matters that iritate persons rather asylum, and that after her release from confinement he compromised with her family by the payment of $500, and thus

As if the Halpin story, with all the devilish ingenuity of its concoction, with so many apparently corroborating circumstances, was not bad enough, the anthors of this vile story add to it the assertion that Cleveland had been often found by the police of Buffalo in a beastly drunken condition; that he was guilty of habitual immoralities with women, as is the politician's. He must know and that he consorted with blackguards everybody, and know their dispositions and loose women, drinking and fighting as well. And the very successful ones in their company. If it could be believed for one moment that these charges were founded upon the truth, then it would be felt that Grover Cleveland was indeed a moral leper, totally unworthy of the support of Christians, or of any people with any pretensions to decency, and the demand for his retirement from the ticket would come in thunder tones from the Demo-cracy of the land. We could not afford to jeopardize the just and righteous cause of the people by countenancing the candidature of any such man.

But the charge is a lie on its face. Is it conceivable that these things could have happened in the city of Buffalo, and have been matters of common report, and that then the citizens of that place, without distinction of party-Democrats, Republicans and Independents, church-going and non-church-going people— should have united together as one man and bestowed the Mayoralty of the city upon the low blackguard that the actor in such scenes as Cleveland is described as figuring in must have necessarily been? The supposition is a moustrous absurdity and an insult to the intelligence of the American people. If these accu-sations are true, then the morality of Buffalo must indeed have been at a low ebb, and the citizens of that place, taking them collectively, worse even than the man on whom their highest civic honor was bestowed.

Just about the time that Grover Cleveland, according to this dirty campaign lie, was wallowing in filth and iniquity, we find him submitting to the City Council of Buffalo the following letter in regard to the perils of children and especially of young girls on the streets at a late hour of the night:

22 630 BUFFALO, June 5, 1882. My attention has been called, by a committee from the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, to the number of small boys and girls found upon the streets in the night.

I have reson to believe that many of these children are allowed, and some are obliged, by their parents to thus remain in the streets for the ostensible purpose of earning money by selling newspapers or blacking boots. In truth, however, after a certain hour in the evening, the most, if not all the money they receive, they obtain by begging or by false pre-tenses. In the meantime they are subjected to the worst influences, leading directly to profigacy, vagrancy and crime.

The importance of caring for children who are uncared for by their natural guardians, or who are unmindful of parental restraint, must be apparent to all. In the future, for good or evil, their in-fluence will be felt in the community; and certainly the attempt to prevent their swelling the criminal class is worth an It seems to me that no pretext should be permitted to excuse allowing young girls to be on the streets at improper hours, since the result must necessarily

The disposition of the boy (child though he be) to aid in his own support or that of others in an honest, decent way, ought not to be discouraged. But this does not call for his being in the street at late hours, to his infinite damage morally mentally and physically, and to the danger of society.

I respectfully suggest that this subject be referred to the Committe on Ordinances and the attorney, and that a committee from the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children be invited to cooperate with them in an effort to frame an ordinance which will remedy the evil herein considered.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Mayor. This letter indicates a solicitude in regard to female virtue not at all in keeping with the vicious character that has been given to Grover Cleveland by the Republican journals that repeat the slanders against his good name, and this, taken into connection with thousands of incidents in the career of the man, give the lie to the damaging reports against

Considering the phenomenal popularity of Cleveland and the handsome support that his own people have given him. it might hardly seem necessary for any Democratic journal to take the trouble of defending him; no defense would seem necessary; but lest it should be said that the story is being covered up and that Democratic papers are afraid to publish it, we have given our readers the substance of it. It is a pitiful matter, and one that shows how much of depravity goes in with politics and how unscrupulous are those who will go any lengths for party purposes.—Columbia Register.

Who Can Tell ?

Some years ago there was a young physician in Texas who was loved by all on account of his gentle, loving disposi-tion. Among his more humble but not less devoted admirers was a mocking bird that had been born and raised in his garden. The bird took the greatest fancy to him, and when he returned home in the evening would hop round his front steps and then fly to a tree near-by and sing for hours at a time. The bird appeared to be in an ecstacy of delight whenever the doctor was at home. Finally the yellow fever broke out here, and among others, the doctor was stricken down. He lingered for long days and then died. On the night before his death the watchers by his bedside had their attention attracted by the mournful, sobbing notes that the "doctor's bird" (as they called it) uttered throughout the night. The next day the doctor died, and that night the bird was silent. After the funeral the family opened the room to air it, and when the bed was drawn aside the first thing seen was the mocking bird lying at the head of the bed, dead. How it got there no one knew, but there it was, dead, as though it could not survive the one it loved so well.

One may have all the virtues, and possess all the endowments which comes from the benign accidents of wealth- and ineage, and yet want the one thing which will make his life happy and successful. One of the curious things about such a bereavement is, that the person whom Nature has so impoverished hardly ever, and perhaps never, knows exactly it is"—as that renowned ethical philoso-pher, Josh Billings, would put it—"that ails him." He is a man of business, we will suppose, and is strictly truthful and upright; he fulfills all his engagements to the very letter; he is punctual, and not over-exacting; but he does not have the art to please. He lacks, in short,

We all know the preacher who lacks than establish principles, and who very soon comes to grief in his parish. He has been scattering dynamite in the most careless possible way, and wonders why anybody is hurt, and doesn't hear anything but the rebound from the explo-

To the politician, tact means often a positive and indispensable capital in trade. It far supersedes talent when it stands alone by itself. It is not proba-ble that there is a single human nature manage to do this, and to enter into the various interests which engage different men with an ease and alacrity that reach the very summit of art, while the absence of art is never doubted, or the skill of the thing is not expected. The politician who has tact does not let it desert him the day after the election. The want of tact in a lawyer will often lose him his case, no matter how well read he is in the law pertaining to it. Before a jury, the gifts of adroitly putting a thing so as to chime with the eelings and prejudices of twelve different men is all important. It gives to the lawyer who adds to respectable talents this power, consummate influence.

Tact in studying the feelings and peculiarities of his patients is one of the prime requisites of a physican. He can-not successfully minister to their ailments unless he thoroughly understands their inmost mental peculiarities and succeeds in humoring them. He will know the English of placebo and the value of breadpills: and, in certain cases—in most cases, in fact—he will keep the thought of danger in abeyance.

But after all, there is no place where tact is not needed. Its usefulness in the daily, general relations of life is paramount. It carries for its possessor a gentle, unconscious persuasion with it He will make his way without seeming to know how he has made it. We can remember one person after another who is afflicted with an almost ludicrous absence of this quality, and who is perpetually in Mrs. Partington's dilemmasaid she never opened her mouth without putting her foot in it. If some visi-tor arrives who has lately had a near relitive hung, the object of the gallows will be at once introduced and expatiated upon with peculiar unction and persistence. The wrong topic is always introduced by the ill-arranged individuals, and is sure to be discussed in the most ill-timed and mal-apropos way .- The

Rubbed as Black as a Crow.

Some years ago, when the terrible "Yellow Jack" was in Savannah, a Judge of the Supreme Court of the State was holding session in an upper county, but within twenty-four hours' run, by rail, of the infected city. Quite suddenly, late one afternoon, he was seized with a headache, pain in his back, limbs, etc. Having heard that those were the salutations which Yellow Jack extends to his victims when approaching them, the Judge in great consternation, applied to a friend who was "posted" for advice. A hot mustard bath was ordered at once, and the Judge was soon laving himself in the irritating fluid. Presently he felt better, and, finding a cake of soap in the bath-tub, he began to apply it quite freely upon his person. After some pleasant exercise in this way, he looked down for the first time on his body and limbs, and to his horror discovere d that he was turning black. His friend was hurriedly sent for, came in and declared that the symptoms were intensely ex-pressive of yellow fever.

"But," said the Judge, "I feel no pain I feel well." "So much the worse; the absence of pain is a marked symptom." "Oh," groaned the Judge, "what shall "The only hope is in mustard; rub away," was all the advice his friend could give.

And he did rub, with a will. On examination, he was as black as a crow, and the "soap," which a careless servant had dropped into the tub, was discovered to be somebody's patent paste blacking. The Judge survived .- San Francisco Ar gonaut.

Van Winkle King Cotton Press

Has long been before the public, and is too well known to need any further description. Its chief points of merits are: It takes very little room, is easily handled, and takes so little power; can be used on all kinds of powers—horse, water or steam. Ginning and packing can all go on at the same time, without interfering with the Gin. A two-inch belt will pack a 500 lb. bale of cotton. It saves its cost the first season in labor.

Read the following Testimonial: ANDERSON, S. C .- Mr. John E. Peoples -- Sir: The

Steam Power Van Winkle Cotton Press bought from you last Fall has given entire satisfaction. I packed bales of cotton weighing 660 to 725 lbs. in packed bales of cotton weighing 600 to 725 188. In five minutes with all ease, using a 4-inch belt and 25 lbs. steam. There did not seem any more strain on the Press than with a 450 lb. bale. For durability, strength, lightness of power, small quantity of steam required, economy of space, I deem it the King of all Cotton Presses; especially so as the low price at which it can be bought for puts it within the property man running a steam Gin. In fact reach of every man running a steam Gin. In fact I would not be without it for twice its cost. I would advise all my friends to buy one of Van Winkle's Steam Power Cotton Presses, as M. A. COBB you will save its cost in labor in one year. Below find the names of parties who are using the Van Winkle Press, who wi

THE HALL SELF-FEEDING COTTON GIN.

C P Davis, S J Duckworth,

Manufactured at Sing Sing, N. Y., has given satisfaction wherever used. The Saws are made of the best imported steel. The saw shaft is the largest made. An examination of other Gins will convince you it is the most substantially built Gin in use. It never breaks the roll, and therefore does away with the expense of the revolving head, as the secret of making the Gin to prevent its breaking the roll is in the proper shape of the roll-box. What a puzzle the little child is in the domestic economy. How the mother gives of her own life and strength to support the life of her blessed little youngster!

How the child kicks, and laughs, and crows! How the child grows, and is heavier and heavier every day.

And yet she lifts him, and tosses him, and plays with him, and takes care of him by day and by night. Is it any wonder the mother breaks down? Her back aches. Her stomach fails her. Her liver is bad. Her blood is thin, and she says she feels poorly. Yes, yes, poorly—very poorly. Give mother a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters. She needs the iron in her blood, which that will put there. She must have strength, or she will be a confirmed old invalid. In the Spring of 1882 I was attacked with a very bad cough, which continued to grow worse until fall, when I got so weak that I could not get about. I tried a great many kinds of medicine but continued to grow worse. I was notified that I had consumption and would probably die. Dr. Holloway finally told mo to try Brewer's Lung Restorer. They sent to Ward's Store and got a bottle and I commenced taking it rightaway. After taking two or three doses, I began to improve, and by the time I had used up one bottle I was able to get on my feet again. I am now in excellent health I am confident that the Lung Restorer saved my life and my neighbors are of the same opinion. It is the best Lung Remedy ever made in my opinion. Dr. II. promised me that he would write to the manfacturers and tell them of the wonderful cure it made in my case. CANE MILL, Excelsior Cider Mill and Ford Cutters, for sale by

Statement of Mr. Benj. H. Hearndon:

Early in November, 1881, while sewing on the machine, my wife was taken with a severe pain in her side, which was soon followed by hemorrhages from her lungs and a severe cough. Fever commenced, she could neither cat or sleep, and in a few weeks she was reduced to a living skeleton. The attending physician told me that he thought one of her lungs was entirely gone. She could not retain the most delicate nourishment on her stomach. I then agreed with Dr. Sullivan, my family physician, to call Dr. Holloway in consultation. They made a final examination of the patient and pronounced the case hopeless. Dr. Holloway then suggested the Brewer's Lung Restorer as a last resort. I sent for a bottle and gave her a dose. I found that she could retain it on her stomach, and after about the third dose, I began to notice some improvement in her condition. I continued the medicine regularly, and by the time she had taken two bottles, she was able to walk about the house. She is now in better health than she has enjoyed for several years. I believe the Lung Restorer saved her life. We have a family of six children, some of them grown."

Mr. Hearndon's Postoffice is Yatesville, Upson County, Ga. He is a thoroughly reliable man in every particular.

Spartanburg, S. C., March 13, 1884.

Your most valuable medicine (Swift's Specific) has done me so much good that I feel like saying this for the benefit of those who suffer like I did. I was poisoned by poison oak, and saw not a well day for six six years I used almost every kind of medi-cine, but none had the desired effect. After using six bottles of Swift's Specific I am restored to perfect health—with not a sign of that awful poison left! Yours truly, DAVID NESBITT.
